

Exciting The World By Recreating An Ancient Therapy

Willow Bunch, SK – March 12, 2009 – CPrize Foundation Inc., a non-profit incorporated in March 2008, operating Willow Bunch College and www.inntherapy.com, is putting the world on notice that we are recreating a therapeutic method used around the Galilee 2000 years ago. To that end we advertised for and promptly received applications from three neuroscientists interested in rediscovering the method.

Think how many people want better health without using drugs, invasive medical procedures or want a sure way to cure ailments and diseases considered by doctors to be incurable. Will one technique apply to help all of them? We will only find out as we test and work with the method and develop procedures.

The therapeutic method wasn't new 2000 years ago. Our research shows the method was used in Ireland's first hospital at Armagh 2650 years ago (to 700AD) and around the Greek Aegean Islands 2300 years ago, where the medical profession had its origins, before they lost the method. This method was used in 13th century Spain too. Even if not entirely, most techniques were no longer taught, or were lost due to disuse or disbelief. Our research indicates they can be rediscovered quickly by applying the same methods found in "Practically Dreaming".

We've already rediscovered a holistic means to treat Alzheimer's. How many billions can that save annually in taxes and insurance when governments and insurers decide to treat people suffering from it? (Over $300 billion a year is spent in the industrialized world on this kind of care alone.) Consider too the heartache of those who see a loved one slowly lose their mind.

Our premise was simple. Seeing healing by suggestive techniques was done on built-in hope and seldom used brain functions, it can be recreated. Throughout recorded history the means to diagnose and find health solutions was partially done via dreams and visions. One American last century, Edgar Cayce, applied a related technique.

So what's the next step? We are launching a bond issue to fund research; or to prepay for therapies. What part of this interests you most, learning how to do healing; or getting healed? More information is available on CJZZ's Epiphanies, a new radio program starting March 30. (download: ncra.ca, rabble.ca, mininova.org)
